About the Play

Sandra Laub's "Picking Up Stones: An American Jew's Wakes to a Nightmare" blends wry humor, tragedy, and voices from differing political, cultural, and religious stripes to create a fresh commentary on what it means to be a liberal Jew in America today: balancing allegiance to Israel, taking a stand against antisemitism and trying to act out of a morality based on Jewish values. Laub dramatizes a variety of voices and perspectives emerging in the wake of grief, anger, heartache, and fear after the October 7 Hamas attack in Israel. Laub commands the stage in this 95-minute one-woman play. Talk back with Sandy after the play.
