NRC Code of Ethics Statement

NRC Members agree to uphold the highest ethical standards as defined by the NRC Code of Ethics in all business dealings. Members who violate the NRC Code of Ethics risk expulsion from the NRC under the ethics violation enforcement policy.

NRC Dues Deductibility Statement

Under the Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 the estimated percentage of the NRC membership dues to be used for federal lobbying purposes may not be deducted on your federal tax return as a business expense.

The NRC estimates that 38.5% of your dues investment will be used for lobbying as defined by federal law.

Further, no part of the NRC dues may be deducted as a charitable contribution for federal tax purposes, but may be deducted as a business expense, subject to the information above. For Federal Income Tax Purposes: Membership dues are deductible expenses as ordinary and necessary business expenses according to the IRS Code Section 162(e). Contributions of gifts to the NRC are not deductible as charitable contributions. NRC federal ID #37-0990937.

Affiliate Membership

Affiliate members are companies that are partially or completely owned by an NRC member company. When applying for affiliate membership, applicants must identify the existing NRC members on whom they are relying for affiliate membership consideration. When corporate affiliations include contractor and supplier companies, then at least one contracting company must join under the appropriate contractor category. To help explain:

Example 1: Company A (not an NRC member) owns Contractor B (with annual revenues of $3 million) and Supplier C. B and C want to join NRC. Their dues would be $2,700 (B=$1800 for C-2 membership and Supplier C=$900 for Supplier membership).

Example 2: Contractor A (with annual revenues of $11 million) buys Suppliers B and C and Contractor D (with revenues of $3 million) and all want to be NRC members. The total dues would be $5,400 (A=$2,700; B=$900; C=$900; and D=$900).
