I'm excited to announce the hiring of Elizabeth Turner as our new Assistant News Director of Daily Content and Streaming.

Elizabeth is a passionate journalist who is already part of the CBS News family and is no stranger to local news.

Currently she's the Senior Broadcast Producer for the CBS Evening News with Norah O'Donnell, helping shape daily coverage for the evening newscast as well as executing the live broadcast from the control room.

She's been at Evening News for almost five years and before that she was with CBS This Morning in various roles which included managing editorial content, planning and the rundown of the two-hour broadcast.

Elizabeth got her start in local news in Reno, Nevada and then worked at WPEC in West Palm Beach – where she obtained valuable hurricane producing experience.

Before jumping to the network, she spent seven years at WSB-TV in Atlanta, one of the top local stations in the country.

She held various producing roles while at WSB – including producing the 5pm newscast which was at the time the highest rated newscast in the U.S.

Elizabeth loves local news, loves the energy of a local newsroom, and loves covering local community stories that truly make an impact.

At CBS Miami, she will oversee our daily operation and editorial content, and also elevate our streaming opportunities.

I believe her addition to this newsroom will be a huge opportunity for us to build on our goal of truly making a difference in our South Florida community.

Please join me in welcoming Elizabeth to CBS Miami.

Her first day will be January 8th.
