Subject: New Assistant News Director

Good afternoon everyone:

I am happy to report that we have promoted James Gorcos to the role of Assistant News Director. As many of you know James is from the Chicago area (northwest Indiana). He attended Butler University in Indianapolis, where he worked as a Master Control op, live truck operator, and live production at one of the local PBS stations affiliated with the university. In 2002, his first television job was at WISH TV in Indianapolis where he interned. He worked as the overnight assignment editor and associate producer. In 2005, moved To Albuquerque, New Mexico where he produced various newscasts during his time there. By 2011, he took a job in Portland as the 11pm producer and became a managing producer within a year. While there, he produced a regional Edward R Murrow award-winning newscast. Finally in 2014 he accepted a morning executive producer position here at KGTV, and then in 2020, moved to dayside executive producer. We are all the better for it. James has proven himself to be a hard-working journalist who is a creative idea generator and someone who is always looking at ways to make our newscasts better.

James will start his new role on Monday the 10th of July. The dayside EP role will be posted and go live by Friday of this week. Please congratulate James when you have a moment.

Leon
