Announcement: Call it the Great Realignment, not the Great Resignation.
I am moving on to a perfect job for me at this point in my life and career. Starting next month I will be taking on a new job as the Multi-Platform News Director for Northwest Public Broadcasting. I will be overseeing the news operations for a group of NPR and PBS stations covering most of the state of Washington. It's a job where I will be able to focus on issue and community oriented journalism and have a better work/life balance. It is also exactly what I was looking to do as I round out my long career in the news business.
The job is a staff position at the Edward R. Murrow College of Communication at Washington State University in Pullman, which is where I will be based. The icing on the cake, as I will once again be working on a college campus. More to come as I move on to the next adventure in my career.
