Tasting Along the Wine Road

If you've never been wine tasting before, it can be an intimidating experience. With a few tasting tips and etiquette suggestions, you'll be a pro in no time. Remember, the winery's host is there to help you enjoy your experience and learn about their wines. Here is some basic information to help you have a positive wine tasting adventure.

- As you enter the tasting room, the winery host will greet you and get you started with wine glasses and explain which wines are available for tasting.
- Most tasting rooms charge a fee to taste their wines. Some wineries apply this fee to your purchase, while others may not.
- Some wineries may offer a variety of tasting flights, including wine and food pairings. The tasting fee will vary depending upon what option you select.
- Tasting rooms vary from elaborate to rustic settings in the cellar, and tastings can be held sitting down or standing up. Be prepared to enjoy all types of experiences.
- Wineries may offer you a list of their wines with tasting notes. We recommend reading the notes as you sip the wines. See if you can identify any of the aromas or flavors listed in the tasting notes.
- Wineries have a recommended tasting order to help you get the most out of your tasting experience. Generally, the tasting order will be sparkling wines, white wines, rosé wines, red wines and then dessert wines. Not all wineries make all these types of wines, so you may only be tasting one or more of those categories.
- Please remember you are sharing the tasting space with others, so please keep the noise level down. Everyone wants to enjoy their tasting experience.
- Ask questions. Be curious. Besides finding wines you enjoy, wine tasting is an opportunity to learn more about wine, the wineries you visit, the vineyards where the winery sources its grapes, and so much more. Your winery host will be happy to talk to you about all these topics and more. There are no dumb questions when you're trying to learn about wine.
- It's okay to skip any of the wines on the tasting list. Some visitors want to taste only red wines while others are interested in tasting only certain varietals. It's your choice.
- You do not have to drink all of the wine in your glass. Toss the unwanted wine into the dump bucket provided for this purpose
- Remember, no one under the age of 21 may sample wine—not even your children. Everyone should be prepared to show a photo I.D..
- If you're interested in visiting other wineries, but are unsure of which ones, the winery staff is a good resource regarding neighboring wineries. You might also ask your fellow tasters for their recommendations. Your next favorite winery could be just a recommendation away.
- In between winery visits, drink plenty of water. It will help cleanse your palate and also keep you hydrated—a simple way to help you have an enjoyable wine tasting day.
- Pack snacks and eat something in between each wine tasting stop. Neutral foods like bread, crackers and nuts are good. If you aren't taking time to stop for lunch, be sure to have some cheese, deli meats or other forms of protein to help you absorb the alcohol you're consuming throughout the day.
- Avoid chewing gum or eating spicy foods during your wine tasting day. Both can alter your palate, changing how the wine will taste in your mouth.
- Wine is an alcoholic beverage so please taste responsibly. Whenever possible, have a designated driver.
- We suggest limiting yourself to four (4) tastes at each winery you visit. Wineries cannot serve anyone that appears intoxicated.
- Avoid using all scented products, especially perfume, cologne or aftershave, prior to wine tasting. Scented products will mask the aromas of the wines for you and all those around you, lessening the experience for everyone.
- Children are welcome at wineries except on Wine Road event weekends, but please keep an eye on them. Wineries are busy places, with heavy equipment running, so it's not safe for unsupervised children.
- If you choose to picnic at the winery and enjoy some wine, the wine must be from that winery. Wineries CANNOT have other wine or alcoholic beverages served on their property. Be sure to ask permission before you picnic; don't assume it's all right.
