Rebecca Nos, RN, BSN

Nurse Manager

At age 16, I was invited to watch a recording of my best friend's mom's homebirth. That lit a spark in me leading me on a course combining pregnancy and birth work with a passion for mission work. I credit my dad for introducing me to mission work. Through my later teen and early adult years, I visited several countries in Europe and Asia for mission trips, with a goal of eventually ending up on the mission field full time in India. Meanwhile I graduated from nursing school with my RN. After spending a summer in India, I decided I wasn't going back unless I was married.

Well, I ended up getting married, but not going back to India, but living in Ohio instead. I worked as a nurse in the hospital, and my husband, Romy, and I volunteered in college ministry at Ohio State University together. I kept working as a part time nurse, and had another child. South Carolina began calling to us when we were pregnant with our third, as both sets of our parents now lived there. We moved to Columbia in 2013. I got my BSN from Ohio Christian online while my fourth child was a baby. After that, I came to Daybreak for the first time to work and get trained in limited OB ultrasound. After I gave birth to my fifth child (my Daybreak baby), my health prevented me from returning to work.

In 2021, I was able to come back and work at Daybreak part time. In 2023, a freak accident left me unable to return to work yet again. I thought my time at Daybreak had come to an end, even though I loved the work there. Unwilling to accept a life of incapability and with a God-given faith, I went through extensive effort, and sought the Holy Spirit about how to regain my health and overcome debilitating symptoms.

God is faithful to what He promises in His Word. I particularly like Psalm 103. Verse three says He "Who forgives all your sins, Who heals all your diseases". By the beginning of this past school year, my health had returned! I was beginning to get the nudge from my husband and from my Heavenly Father to keep walking into the next thing the Lord had for me. At the beginning of 2025, the job for Nurse Manager at Daybreak popped into my inbox through a third party. Over the next month or so, God began to work in my heart that this was something I should probably pursue. Then as the month drew to an end, I began to get confirmation of this direction everywhere I turned, so it was hard to believe this wasn't where I should direct my steps.

I began to lay out my vision of where we might be able to take Daybreak to further the Lord's work in conjunction with medical services to the leadership and board, and well, here I sit in my Daybreak office writing this! God is amazing, His caring, tender Father's heart is to restore and heal us, and that is what He has done for me.
