Dr. Andrea Davis, CEO and owner of Davis Physical Therapy & Sports Rehab, epitomizes what it means to be a Dynamic Woman. Her journey is one of dedication, innovation and an unwavering commitment to her community and profession.

2024 has been a big year for Dr. Davis. She was a contestant on The Blox, named to the NJBIZ Power 100 and Health Care Power 50 and recognized as a NJBIZ Health Care Hero and Leader in Digital Technology. Her clinic also won the 2023 Best of Burlington for Best Physical Therapy Clinic and earned top honors in rehabilitation and sports medicine. She continues to innovate after 25 years in physical therapy, particularly with programs like the Davis PTSR ACL Rehab and advanced technology applications.

One of Dr. Davis' most significant professional risks was starting her practice during a challenging time, relying on her 401K to fund it. The gamble paid off, and within three months, she expanded from one room to a three-room facility. Since then, the practice has grown year after year, and Dr. Davis expanded to an even bigger space and launched a new company, Analytics for Athletes.

"Go get what you want, and don't be afraid of failure," she says. "Doubt naysayers and surround yourself with good people who make you better."

Dr. Davis believes in giving back, supporting women's sports, local clubs and school programs, and dedicating her time to community initiatives. She draws inspiration from her mother, Maggie Johnson, and colleague, Dr. Antoinette Shields, a West Point graduate whose service is both humbling and inspiring.

Outside of work, Dr. Davis loves Philadelphia's rich culture, diverse culinary scene and live music venues. She also cherishes her time with her husband and two teenage children.
