After Moses came down off the mountain, having heard God tell him of the 10 Commandments,

God called Moses back to the mountain to give him two tablets on which those laws would be written.

And so, Moses went.

In addition to the tablets, God told Moses many things: how the tablets should be stored, (the Ark of the Covenant) and how to build a special place of worship called a tabernacle.

God even told Moses how the priests should dress.

God said to Moses, “Take your brother, Aaron, and his sons with him from among all the children of Israel, that they may minister to me as priests. Aaron and his sons shall be anointed with oil, and shall be ordained priests. And you shall make holy garments for Aaron, your brother. Aaron shall wear these garments when he ministers, so that he may be heard when he goes into worship before The Lord and when he comes out. These will be a token of his ministry, in order that the holy offerings of the people of Israel may be acceptable before the Lord.”

And Moses did as God instructed.

(Wait just a minute, then ask)

I wonder how these special garments make Aaron and his sons feel?

I wonder if these garments remind us of anything? (They look like the vestments our clergy wear)
