The recent basketball shootout game showcased intense competition among the junior and senior teams, featuring players from the red, green, and blue houses!

Juniors Game Highlights

The junior game had some mild confusion. Specifically, during crucial moments when the rules were unclear to the students in the game. A notable disagreement occurred when a student from the green house was initially already removed from the game. Surprisingly, they  rejoined the game a couple minutes after. Despite them already being disqualified. Regardless of these challenges, the green house showcased impressive teamwork and determination. Which ultimately secured victory over their rivals.

Seniors Game Highlights

The senior game took the competition to another level, highlighting the players' athletic skills and fierce rivalries. A standout moment occurred when Jonathan Black, from the red house, and Odeanno Cox, from the green house, teamed up for an impressive shot. Barry Loreus, another student from the red house, dominated throughout the match. He consistently outsmarted his opponents. The rivalry between Jonathan and Odeanno kept the students screaming for support for each respective house. In a breathtaking finale, the red house emerged victorious, proving their strength and resilience in a riveting match.

This year's basketball shootout was a spectacular display of talent, teamwork, and school spirit, leaving everyone buzzing with excitement. Both the junior and senior games provided unforgettable moments, fostering companionship and healthy competition.
