

Ken Jeske has been the administrator of Oregon Corrections Enterprises (OCE) since 2013, heading up a self-sustaining, semi-independent State Agency with over 100 staff overseeing almost 1500 adults in custody assigned to OCE training programs.

He came to OCE from Oregon Youth Authority (OYA) where he worked for 3.5 years as the administrator of the professional standards office.

Prior to working for OYA, he spent 14 years with the Oregon Department of Corrections. For eight of those years, he served as an officer before joining the special investigations unit, later serving as the assistant chief investigator and eventually the hearings administrator. Ken has nearly two decades of experience in public safety and a strong track record of effective team building. At OYA, he oversaw his unit's organizational transformation process. He was responsible for implementing the same performance management system at OCE. He enjoys leading his team who excel at data-driven strategic planning and transforming lives.
