Every April, the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC) invites educators, families, and communities to come together for the Week of the Young Child (WOYC) – a joyful celebration of early learning, young children, and the adults who support them. Through themed days, WOYC highlights the critical role of play, creativity, and collaboration in a child's development. It's a time to recognize the importance of high-quality early childhood education and to advocate for the professionals who make it possible!
