A few months ago, I was browsing the Wish app on my phone. It has all the cool gadgets that I used to shop for and this beautiful G shaped lamp with the colored lights caught my eye. It looked so cool and unique with its graceful design, colorful lights and a charging platform for a phone and a clock! I thought that maybe there was a version of it on Amazon and I checked, and there was one! Finally, at Christmas, I was lucky enough to get gift money from relatives so on Christmas Day, I took the plunge and ordered the multifunction lamp for my white nightstand.

When it came, I plugged it in with the supplied cable and adaptor and a lovely white light came on! The lamp has a set of buttons for music, alarm clock setting, brightness control and light setting mode and there is an illustrated manual that is included. The real magic comes when you download the app! I scanned the QR code and installed the Music app. Immediately, I started the Music Light app which has two versions of a color wheel and function buttons on the bottom.

There is Color, where you can choose up to 16 million colors! Light Effect has 256 light patterns to choose from, Wakeup, where you can select a light color and a sound such as chirping birds or a crowing rooster to rouse you from your slumber, Sleep, where you can go to sleep to a lovely shade of light of your choosing and a soothing sound such as pounding surf or rain and Music, where you can select a rainbow light pattern that responds to any sound around you, even the hum of the heater!

The Bluetooth speaker is not concert hall quality, but not bad either. The sound is clear and balanced. Phone calls seem to come in nice and clear and I love how the phone lies on the platform for charging with the clock on the side facing my bed.

I have had more fun with this lamp, and it is so magical in so many ways; the design is minimalistic yet elegant with the graceful G shape and the white is lovely. I would heartily recommend it to any autistic adult who is tech savvy, but the app may be too complicated for some. The mixed reviews on Amazon reflect some user frustrations with the app complexity and multiple functions, but I have had no problems with that, and this lamp sends me over the moon!
