God Created the World

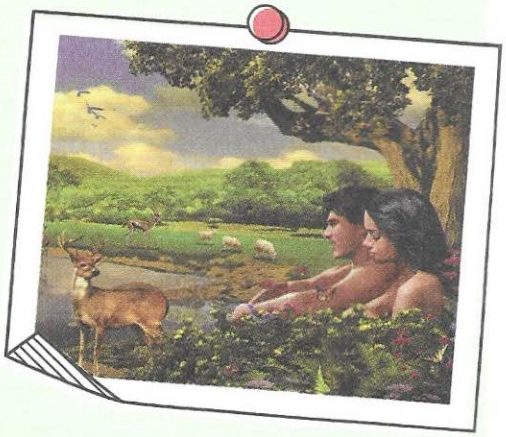
GENESIS 1:1–2:3



In the beginning, there was God. There was nothing to see or hear or touch or taste or smell. There was nothing at all. Except God.

Then God said, "Let there be light." And there was light. God called the light "day" and the darkness "night." And that was Day One.

The next day God said, "Let the waters be separated." He made a space between the waters and called it "sky." And that was Day Two.

On the third day God said, "Let the dry land appear." He called the waters "seas" and the dry land "earth." He said, "Let there be plants and fruit trees." That was Day Three.

Next God said, "Let there be lights in the sky." God made the sun and the moon and the stars. And that was Day Four.

Then God said, "Let the waters swarm with creatures and let birds fly across the sky." God made all the water animals and all the animals that fly. And that was Day Five.

On the sixth day God said, "Let the earth produce living creatures." He made all sorts of animals. Then He said, "I will make people." God created people, blessed them, and told them to rule over all the rest of creation. And that was Day Six.

After each day God had looked at His creation and said that it was good. When the next day came, God saw that everything He had made was good, so He rested. And that was Day Seven.
