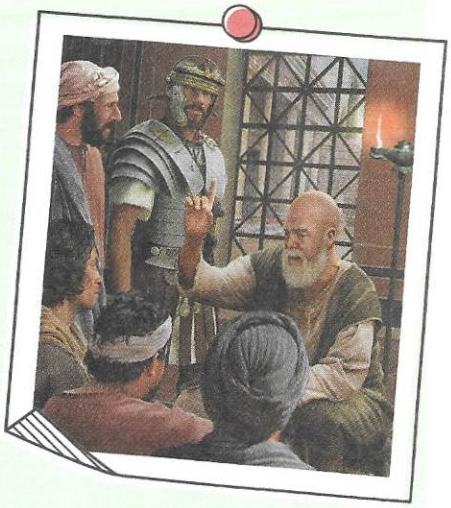
Paul Traveled to Rome

ACTS 27–28



Paul taught people about Jesus wherever he went. Paul was put in prison for teaching about Jesus. A Roman soldier named Julius put Paul and other prisoners on a boat traveling to Rome.

As Paul and the others were sailing to Rome, strong winds made it difficult to sail. Paul told the boat's crew that it was not safe to continue to Rome. The crew did not listen to Paul.

The boat sailed into a bad storm for several days. Paul told everyone on the boat, "Don't be afraid. An angel of God told me that everyone on the boat will be safe." Paul believed the angel's words.

After a time, the boat struck land and broke apart. Everyone was safe, just as the angel told Paul. All the men on the boat swam or floated to land, an island called Malta. The people on Malta treated them with kindness. After staying on Malta for three months, Paul and the men sailed to Rome.

In Rome, Paul could stay in his own house with a soldier guarding him. People came to Paul's house to talk with him about God and Jesus. Paul continued to tell people the truth about Jesus, God's Son.
