43%

Of adults with the lowest literacy levels, 43 percent live in poverty, and 70% of adult welfare recipients have low literacy levels.

When adults learn how to read, write, do basic math, and use computers, they have the power to lift themselves out of poverty, lower health care costs, find and keep sustainable employment, and ultimately change their lives.

Tutor comments about their adult learners:

Leticia became a naturalized citizen last summer. At her job, she speaks the most English, and so takes the clients who do not speak Spanish. I think Leticia is more confident in herself. She is still more comfortable in her native Spanish, but if there are no Spanish speakers available she tries to use English instead of just walking away.

He can work a little with the computer, and he uses it to listen to music. He can do his own bills, read road signs, and read stories. My student is more confident in himself. – Marcia G.
