What is The LEAD Tune In Process?

A transformational journey with a vibrant team that commits to listening to God and guiding their congregation into the neighborhood and world.

What happens at LEAD Seminars?

Faith practices, skills, new thinking, and sharing stories help teams make and carry out their own plan for listening to God.

Why would we want a coach?

A coach asks great questions to facilitate transformation and encourages accountability.

Why are we doing this?

This process is for leaders that are hoping for more than church-as-we-know-it. The process is designed to equip leaders who will transform their congregations inside out, one step at a time.

What people are saying:

- + A way to train and empower leaders to listen to the Spirit and help others discern God's activity outside the walls of the congregation.
- + A deeper conversation of what our model of church is really about. It has been helpful to realize real change takes time and a ton of effort.
- + Helping our church be Jesus in the world instead of just parishioners on Sunday mornings.
- + A wonderful process to help pastors and congregations learn to listen to God; to each other; to the congregation; and to the neighborhood.
- + Potentially saving the church from itself (!). By that, I mean a rigid institutionalism and inflexibility that focuses on the wrong things.
- + Transformation journey that requires a high level of active participation by team members
- + Positive way to understand our spirituality and help us to show our congregation the need for relationships that develop.

All this is brought to you by the RISE UP! Capital Fund Campaign as your synod says
THANK YOU for being the church together.

What happens at LEAD Seminars? Count on five things at every LEAD Seminar: Faith practices, The Sacred Meal, the Eucharist shared at a meal, New Language to shape the journey, Social Science Research to increase leadership capacity, and Great Stories of faith shared among those gathered. We use an interactive learning style that engages the whole person in learning so expect to be on your feet, in conversation, working together, and discovering more about yourself as you listen. The more people you bring from your congregation, the better!

$10 donation? 100% of your gift will go to support congregational leaders like yourself who are recovering from a natural disaster. You may designate your gift to the RECOVERY of physical needs of the church or to RENEWAL of spiritual and emotional health of the church leadership.

For more information, go to waytolead.org/courageouscommunity where people have the courage to ask for what they need and others have the courage to give, even as they have needs of their own.
