Hi Seniors!

As many of you begin submitting your college applications (yayyy!) please ALWAYS read and follow instructions of emails from colleges to which you applied.

Most colleges will ask you to log into their individual online web portals (they all have different names for this). It's the college's PRIMARY WAY to contact you about your individual application status! They'll almost never communicate personal information in the main body of an email, text, Common App, snail mail, or phone call (especially with a parent). They expect you to be responsible for managing this process.

When you log in to each college's portal, you'll probably see a list of items that the college has not yet processed - this doesn't necessarily mean they haven't been sent or received!!! Many colleges take up to two weeks to process data that's already been sent - they will see the original time stamp of when items were submitted so if you (and we) submitted on time there's no need to worry.

Ms. Virden, Ms. Coll, and myself are here to support you in many ways. Let us know if we can help guide you or interpret confusing language in these emails and websites that you are in charge of checking.

Sincerely,

Ms. H
