The Battle of Lake George:

England's First Triumph in the French and Indian War

Against all odds, in 1755, British Commander William Johnson rallied his men through the barrage of enemy fire to send the French retreating to Fort Ticonderoga. Historian William Griffith recounts this important event in U.S. and New York State history.

William Griffith is a lifelong student of American Military History and traces his interest to annual visits to Lake George with his family. He is a 2014 graduate of Shepherd University and is currently completing his Masters of Arts in Military History at Norwich University.
