

THE DEPARTMENT OF
Family Science & Social Work
AT MIAMI UNIVERSITY PRESENTS:

What Does Immigration Reform Mean for Our Students and Clients?

February 17, 2017 - 9:30am-11:30pm - 319 Kreger Hall

Register by clicking here or call 513-529-2323

Kenneth J. Robinson is a graduate of The Ohio State University Moritz College of Law and Miami University. Mr. Robinson has served as Special Counsel on immigration law matters and has served as Adjunct Professor of Immigration & Nationality Law. He is currently a member of the American Immigration Lawyers Association.

Bano Itayim is a graduate of the University of St. Thomas in Houston, Texas and Thomas M. Cooley Law School in Lansing, Michigan. She handles a variety of the firm's immigration matters, including family-based immigration, naturalization, and deportation and removal proceedings. Ms. Itayim helped initiate the firm's Deferred Action for Early Childhood Arrivals (DACA) practice.

Workshop Overview:

As the new administration prepares to enter their government offices, many schools and programs that serve immigrant families have concerns about future policy changes and their impacts on foreign families in our community. This session will allow community members, social service agencies, and school personnel the chance to learn how:

- The administration could impact the delivery of social services to foreign nationals.
- To serve as advocates for families in need.
- To access healthcare and the permissible and prohibited public benefits including public education.
- To work with law enforcement under a Trump administration.
- To take legal and family factors into consideration when making client assessments of foreign nationals.

2.0 Social Work CEUs provided by Miami University Family Science & Social Work Department, pending the Ohio Counselor, Social Worker, & MFT Board Approval