

Our Long Journey Home: Caring for Others through the Season of Death

Dr. Thomas G. Long

In this presentation we will explore the shifting landscape of American death practices, and think deeply about the needs of the dying before death and the mourners after death.

We will talk about some of the myths and misunderstandings that surround death, lift up the true value and purposes of a funeral, and examine the best roles of funeral directors, hospice personnel, clergy and others who offer help to people at the time of death.
