The Good and the Bad News Regarding Domestic Violence Bills — What You Can Do

Here's the good news: After years of effort, this spring both the RI House and Senate passed out of Judiciary Committee a bill to keep guns out of the hands of people convicted of misdemeanor domestic violence crimes. This important bill to protect domestic violence survivors was at long last headed to the House and Senate floors for votes by the full membership.

Now the bad news: When House Speaker Mattiello and Senate President Ruggerio had a last minute dispute over the state budget, the General Assembly recessed this past spring without voting on the bill. It is crucially important for the General Assembly to vote on these bills when it reconvenes this fall to finish its 2017 work.

What you can do: Call the key legislators below and tell them, “Current RI law makes it too easy for dangerous domestic violence abusers, including those who are currently subject to protective orders, to access guns. Reconvene the full Senate and General Assembly right away so they can vote to pass House Bill 5510 and Senate Bill 405.”

Here's how to contact them:

Etched in Glass: The Legacy of Steve Ross

As part of the Rhode Island International Film Festival, a film called “Etched in Glass: The Legacy of Steve Ross” will be shown on Sunday, August 13th at 2:20pm in the Woodman Family Community and Performance Center, on the campus of the Moses Brown School, 250 Lloyd Ave, Providence.

“Etched In Glass: The Legacy of Steve Ross” is the compelling, true story of survival, resilience and hope. Nine-year-old Steve, then Szmulek Rosenthal from Poland, was captured by the Nazis and endured 5 horrific years in 10 concentration camps. Upon his liberation from Dachau, an American soldier showed him kindness, which kindled his resilience, propelling him to dedicate his life to helping disadvantaged young people for over 40 years.

Steve was the driving force behind the iconic New England Holocaust Memorial on the Freedom Trail in Boston. All the while, he searched tirelessly for the soldier who changed the course of his life and the lives of hundreds, if not thousands, of people.

The film has been discussed in several international publications:

Tickets can be purchased at: <http://www.brownpapertickets.com/event/3047190>

The film will be followed by a question and answer session that will include members of Steve’s family and others related to this remarkable story. You can learn more about the film on the film-maker’s website: steverossfilm.org
