Why Kids Need to Experience the Value of Hard Work: Part Two

RACHEL: Cleaning our rooms was a standard chore in our house—one that I hated! I am not a super-organized person in general, and this trait was definitely worse when I was younger.

Week after week, I was told to clean my room, and I put it off as long as I could . . . at least until I heard footsteps coming up the stairs to examine my work. Mom and Dad didn't expect our rooms to look like military barracks, but they did expect them to look neat and nice. And even though I didn't particularly enjoy the process, after spending just a few minutes cleaning and seeing the results, it was rewarding. I immediately saw what my hard work had accomplished, and it felt great.

DAVE: Work might be a challenge for your children, especially if they aren't used to it, but what a blessing to give your kids. Of course, I'm talking about age-appropriate work; nevertheless, the value of work is needed and necessary. Proverbs 22:6 says, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it" (NKJV). When your kids learn hard work from a young age, the habit will stick with them for life.

Keep this in mind when selling SoccerFest tickets with your children. There are valuable lessons to be learned.
