

LEND Training

For graduate and post-graduate professionals working in inter-disciplinary settings with children and youth at risk of or diagnosed with developmental disorders including with autism spectrum disorders.

Build leadership and communication skills and increase your knowledge about identifying and treating these disorders using evidence-based practices, family-based practices, and interdisciplinary approaches, while working in culturally diverse settings.

Community-based training

LEND training requires hands-on experiences in everyday community settings that provide interdisciplinary services to families and children and youth who are at risk for or who have developmental and behavioral disorders, including ASD.

Community sites specify what types of training and clinical activities will be of most help.

Who oversees LEND Training?

LEND faculty members are expert university-based clinicians and educators who provide training and supervision to LEND trainees in their work in community sites. LEND faculty will work with trainees and community staff members to assure that both trainees and sites benefit from collaborating in the LEND Training Program.

We are recruiting trainees to enroll fulltime or part-time 7/1/2017-6/30/2018.

Who can participate?

- Community care or education settings that serve children, youth, and families with developmental disorders or ASD
- Graduate and post-graduate professionals involved in care, advocacy, training, or teaching
- Family members and persons with developmental disorders

Stipends are available for some trainees; there are no costs for training
