

Nighttime Falls

*Increasing Independence Without Sacrifice
by Donovan Morrison, CEO, Luna Lights, Inc*

At Luna Lights, we understand how older adults can often feel when presented with new safety measures. Whether it's using a walker to get around, wearing an alert device or just needing extra help with everyday tasks, older adults are often resistant, not because they don't want to be safer, but because they're simply human. As humans, we all take great pride in our appearance, health, and independence. Being told we can't do something on our own takes a little piece of that away, no matter what the additive solution is.

Our mission is to keep older adults happy, healthy, and safe without imposing on their daily comfort. Through the state-of-the-art Luna Lights system, when a user gets out of bed, lights are illuminated to guide them safely to nighttime destinations. If a nighttime trip takes longer than a predetermined amount of time, a caretaker is alerted immediately that there may have been a fall. It's that simple. No buttons to push. No phone calls. Just fully automatic life-saving technology that's creating peace of mind for older adults.

We understand how difficult it can be to navigate this issue with older adults. That's why we've designed a solution that improves safety without requiring lifestyle compromises. Not one bit. In fact, Luna Lights users are often proud to show off their latest gadget. It's life-saving technology that feels like an exciting new addition to one's home. Not an invasion of it. Pride never subsides, and if we can recognize and acknowledge that fact, we can make the lives of older adults much safer, one step at a time.
