

ALGOP TODAY

Power of the Pen

On November 8, it is my prayer that America sees this election as a “big picture” day. By now, we all know the noise is loud and the stakes are high. We clearly see the national media covering for Hillary Clinton and unabashedly trying to crush Donald Trump. This combination has truly made this election a major directional moment. We are at a dire crossroads for America.

I ask that our citizens who value a return to a conservative country look forward. Did we get it right? Did we put ourselves aside and put America first? The balance of the United States Supreme Court is in our hands- not a committee, elected officials, polls or the media. We, the people. We will make this historical choice of who wears the black robes on the highest court in our land.

We must use the power of our pens to stop the Obama and Clinton liberal transformation they so deeply desire. America needs us desperately. I ask everyone to see this big picture election. Look five, ten or twenty years from now. What will we look like?

Move past the shameful and agenda driven propaganda national media noise. Focus on the important issues and our Republican candidates from the White House to the Alabama court houses. Stand shoulder to shoulder together on our platform principles.

Make November 8 a day we say to the media “You didn’t build that!”

We did.

All the best,

Terry Lathan
