Nearly 90% of the children who call Boys and Girls Country home come from families living in poverty. Many have lived in substandard housing and experienced food insecurity, and some come from abusive backgrounds. Kids from such backgrounds are at greater risk for poor academic achievement, mental and physical health problems, and developmental delays. All of our kids have faced what seem to be insurmountable challenges and may not have had the support system or a history of structure and self-confidence to propel them to success.

Boys and Girls Country helps to break the cycle and effects of poverty and neglect by providing a secure, stable, Christian home environment. Since 1971, Boys and Girls Country has provided nearly 1,500 children the impetus to grow and prosper despite life's obstacles. In addition to bolstering our children with love, care and by meeting their basic needs, we emphasize faith, education, building healthy relationships, and setting goals for the future.
