

John Pellegrini, FDRA Customs Counsel

Considered THE footwear duties expert by many CEOs, John has 40+ years in dealing with footwear customs duties. His practice is concentrated on the regulatory and commercial aspects of international trade. He represents clients with respect to government regulation of the import-export trade, duty planning, and admissibility requirements to name just a few. His clients include multinationals, general merchandise retailers, importers, exporters, domestic and foreign manufacturers, commission agents, trade associations, and international marketing companies.

John has worked with FDRA to help companies save millions through better understanding how to properly classify shoes, as well as how to engineer around duties.
