Sholosh Seudot Halacha Discussion

One Night, Reuven was startled out of his sleep by the sound of incessant barking. He looked out the window and saw that his neighbor, Jack, had left his dog on the roof that night. Each time Reuven was about to fall back asleep, the dog started barking again.

Finally, Reuven had enough of it. He called the hotline of the municipality to complain about the disturbance, and municipality sent the dog-catcher around. The dog-catcher saw that there was indeed a serious disturbance and impounded the dog.

In that country, there were strict laws about noise pollution. Dogs caught disturbing the peace were impounded and never returned to their owner.

“Look, what you have done!” complained Jack. “Because of you I lost an expensive dog. Why didn’t you just tell me that the dog was bothering you? You have known me for years. You know that I would have taken care of it myself. Why did you have to call the municipality to impound my dog?”

“I didn’t know they were going to impound the dog,” answered Reuven. “Besides, it’s your fault for letting your dog bark like crazy on the roof and bother the neighbours.”

What should he do? Find out during Sholosh Seudot with Rabbi Rothman
