The TDPS New Play Workshop is an opportunity to develop a short play in a supportive environment.

Six playwrights will be selected, and assigned a mentor who is a professional dramatist living and working in the Baltimore-DC corridor.

Mentors will serve as guides through the process of rehearsing with a director and actors, filtering and implementing feedback, and revising.

The weeklong event will kick off on Monday, March 5, 2018, with a professional panel on new play development, and will conclude on Sunday, March 11, 2018, with staged readings of the new plays.

• Plays must be written by a current TDPS undergraduate student in good academic standing who are not in rehearsals for another show between March 5-11.

• Plays must be approximately 10 minutes long when read aloud. (8–12 pages, written in 12-pt Times New Roman font and following a generally accepted playwriting format.)

• Plays must have a cast of 2-3 characters (doubling is permitted).

• Plays must be intended for live performance onstage.

• Plays must be considered to be "in development" (you are interested in further developing the play based on the workshop experience).

• You may submit one play. If you submitted a script that was not selected for last year's workshop, you may resubmit that script if it has been substantially revised.

• Along with the script, please submit 3 specific questions you want to explore during the workshop (150 words maximum).
