

ON THE EDUCATION FRONT

At the Wetland Center, we're proud of the programs we've developed and implemented, and many schools seem to feel the same way. The number of schools asking for our programs has increased steadily over the years. As the requests have increased, we've had the pleasure of adding staff to our team.

I'd like to introduce Alicia Moreau, the newest member of our Wetland Center family. Alicia is a graduate of Louisiana State University where she earned a Bachelor of Science in natural resource ecology and management with a concentration in conservation biology. She has worked with the Dallas Zoo as a conservation and community engagement intern and has volunteered with the Trinity River Audubon Center, educating students K-12 about the environment, ecosystems, wildlife and conservation.

Alicia is passionate about the outdoors and educating the public about conservation and wetland resources. We are excited to have her join our team of dedicated educators and look forward to applying her talents to our programming and giving her the opportunity to grow in the environmental education profession.
