Another National Group Recruiting Superintendents in New Jersey

You may have received an email or written correspondence from a group called the National Association of School Superintendents (NASS) recently. This group has been acquired by the Association of California School Administrators. It now appears they are attempting to solicit members across the nation to be part of this group.

NJASA has been an affiliate member of the American Association of School Administrators (AASA) for many years. We work closely with AASA staff on federal legislative issues, professional development opportunities for members, and proactive initiatives in support of public education. Scott McCartney, Superintendent at Moorestown, Matthew Murphy, Superintendent at Ramsey, and Judith Rattner, Superintendent at Berkeley Heights all serve on the AASA Governing Board. New Jersey has significant input in the policies and operation of AASA. New Jersey has no input into NASS.

Active members of AASA automatically receive $1 million in professional liability insurance plus legal assistance benefits. AASA provides broad-based conferences and workshops, including the National Conference on Education, the Summer Leadership Institute and the Legislative Advocacy Conference, and individualized training workshops.

Most importantly, AASA represents your voice and policy positions at the national level. AASA reports news, research and analysis of federal legislation that impacts student achievement.

I hope that you will continue to stay involved and support AASA. Working together, we present a strong united voice for public education in this state and nation.
