

STRATEGIC PLANNING FOR SUCCESSFUL ADVOCACY:

National, state and local examples of human rights and trafficking legislation

Human Trafficking Collaborative Network, Institute for Public Health, and National Council of Jewish Women St. Louis, jointly offer a four part speaker series to help community members fully understand national and local law making procedures and to play an active role in reform of policies in human rights and trafficking. Open to public.

Thursday, November 15th, 2018. Legislative Process: National and Local

This session will examine how laws are made and how one can influence the process. Free lecture but RSVP is requested: <http://bit.ly/2N5M88J>. This session is held from 4:00 to 5:30 PM at the Institute of Public Health, 600 S. Taylor Ave., St. Louis 63110. Doll & Hill Room, 2nd Floor. Parking is available at the garage next door.

SPEAKERS:

Jaci Winship is Senior Community Liaison at the U.S. House of Representatives and a staff person for U.S. Congresswoman Ann Wagner over the past five years. Prior to that, Ms. Winship was State Director for the Mo Faith and Freedom Coalition and also served as Executive Director of Missourians against Human Cloning.

Sarah Wood Martin represents the 11th Ward on the St. Louis Board of Aldermen. She also serves as a board member of National Council of Jewish Women and the Carondelet Community Betterment Federation. In 2015, Ms. Martin was appointed by the Missouri Speaker of the House to serve on the state's first Trafficking Task Force.

MEET AND GREET WITH SPEAKERS FOLLOWS

Clark-Fox
Policy Institute

BROWN SCHOOL AT WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

Washington
University in St. Louis
BROWN SCHOOL

Washington
University in St. Louis

INSTITUTE FOR PUBLIC HEALTH