Hosted by:

The New Hampshire Public Health Association and Dartmouth-Hitchcock

This event brings together health care delivery and public health practitioners to collaborate toward improving population health. Keynotes, plenaries, and workgroups will focus on key population health issues and participants will work to establish a clear path to addressing those issues. The goals of the event are to make valuable connections between health care delivery and public health practitioners and to evolve population health action by building on existing tools and evidence.
