PREVENTION AND PUBLIC HEALTH FUND REPEAL PUTS HEALTH SECURITY AT RISK

Washington, D.C., March 7, 2017 – The below is a statement from Emily J. Holubowich, Executive Director of the Coalition for Health Funding.

“The coverage provisions of Affordable Care Act repeal are dominating the media coverage. But it’s one of the lesser publicized provisions that would have a devastating, direct impact on Americans’ health. Section 101 of the American Health Care Act would repeal the Prevention and Public Health Fund—dealing a crushing blow to the already underfunded Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

The Prevention and Public Health Fund is a critical source of funding for CDC, representing 12 percent of the agency’s overall budget and as much as 100 percent of some of the agency’s core programs. The Fund supports state and local public health efforts to immunize children, detect and prevent the spread of infectious disease outbreaks, and fight the leading causes of death such as heart disease. A cut of this magnitude would have ripple effects throughout the agency, and would likely spill over into other health agencies and programs—medical research, substance use treatment, workforce development—as lawmakers seek ways to fill the void left by Prevention Fund repeal.

As in the practice of medicine, the first goal of health reform should be ‘do no harm.’ Repeal of the Prevention and Public Health Fund not only does more harm than good, it unnecessarily cuts for cutting’s sake without regard for the side effects. It’s the federal government’s responsibility to protect and defend the American people against threats, both foreign and domestic. Shortchanging public health leaves Americans vulnerable to known health threats such as Zika virus, opioid addiction, antibiotic resistance, cancer, foodborne illness, lead poisoning, and those threats yet to be identified. Put simply, repealing the Prevention and Public Health Fund will compromise our nation’s health security.”
