Continue Your Learning At Home With ECCOA

Today's program is a launching point for the College's Essentials of Cardiovascular Care in Older Adults (ECCOA) curriculum. Don't forget to continue your learning at home with the American College of Cardiology's web and case-based learning opportunity! You'll earn hours of continuing education credit (CME and CNE) and be able to submit your learning for up to 17 ABIM Part II MOC credits.

The Essentials of Cardiovascular Care in Older Adults (ECCOA) was designed to teach practitioners key features of aging that directly impact CVD to improve care and quality of life in this growing segment of cardiovascular patients. Using a case-based format, this curriculum highlights important aging-related changes which affect cardiovascular physiology and pharmacology, resulting in age-related differences in the prevention, presentation, and management of CVD in older adults. Important concepts of caring for older patients are also introduced in the setting of CVD, including polypharmacy, multiple chronic conditions, lack of applicable data, and promotes patient-centered care focused on maintaining and/or improving quality, rather than length, of life and preserving function, cognition and independence.
