QUESTIONS?

Each entry for the 2017 Crystal Awards will be judged on how successfully the project meets its individual requirements. Criteria include: 1) statement of design intent, 2) resolution of the program or idea, 3) the quality of the submittal materials (i.e., clarity of the written statements, quality of photography, and how well the imagery supports the written portions).

Entries will be blind-judged by a team of established interior commercial and residential industry leaders from multiple disciplines such as industrial designers, architects and educators located throughout the United States. The winners are not announced until the evening of the Awards Presentation on July 20, 2017.

Jury decisions will be based solely on the materials submitted. Submitted images should not contain any information divulging your identity, (i.e. logos, name templates, etc.).

Entry materials should include names of team members (including appellations), high-quality professional photographs, as well as any associated floor-plans, elevations, sketches, and/or renderings that thoroughly demonstrate the design concept, design process and design execution.

Eligible projects must be submitted by a designer or firm based in the State of Colorado who is not affiliated with a manufacturer brand or showroom, unless noted otherwise in the category description. Eligible projects can be located outside of Colorado. National and international work is encouraged.

Entries from any project that have been previously awarded at the ASID Colorado Crystal Awards will not be accepted. Eligible projects must have been built and completed between May 2013 and February 2017.

The committee reserves the right to close a category if there are only one or two entrants. If a category is designated as closed, entries will be transferred to another applicable category with the permission of the entrant. If it is determined the entry cannot be transferred this may result in a return of the entry fee. This is the ONLY situation where an entry fee may be refunded.
