New CWF President

Installation of new CWF leadership at
June 6 meeting, 11 AM, Room 105

At the June 6 CWF meeting, we will have the installation of our new president, Mary Hawkins, our new president elect, Gail Reinhard, and six new circle leaders: Jade Forlidas, Carol Hankla, Mandy Lowe, Pat Malone, Jane Clay Meadors, and Pam Zimmerman.

Mary Hawkins is a lifelong member of Woodmont Christian Church. In fact, her grandparents, Mary and Charles Hawkins, were charter members of Woodmont, and her father, Charlie Hawkins, signed the charter when he was eight years old. Mary's mother, Lee Ann, and grandmother, Mary, each served as president of CWF. She has served Woodmont as a Sunday School teacher, Vacation Bible School teacher, and Walk through Bethlehem participant and served with Woodmont outreach programs such as Room at the Inn, The Nashville Food Project and others.

Mary is retired from a 27 year in commercial real estate. She fills her time with her art and classes at Vanderbilt working towards a Masters in Liberal Arts and Science and volunteer work. And taking care of her two dogs, Nana and Mr. Brown Paws.

Mary's daughter and son-in-law, MaryAllen and Jelle Vanasten, live in Gent, Belgium.

The last CWF meeting this year is June 6 at 11:00 in Room 105 and lunch will follow at noon. There will be no board meeting in June.

WHERE YOUR TREASURE IS,
THERE YOUR HEART WILL BE ALSO.

Goals for Woodmont

by Clay Stauffer

I have always believed in the concept of setting goals and knowing priorities. It's been said before that, "if you don't know where you are going, any road will get you there." Goals can give us direction and purpose and can allow us to align our time and energy towards the things that matter most. Goals can keep us focused and prevent us from being distracted by things that aren't as important. Back in March, I shared ten basic goals with the Woodmont Board and I would like to share them here with the congregation. Some of these are short term and some are longer term. These ten are not in any particular order because they are all important.

- 1) LEADERSHIP DEVELOPMENT - Invest more intentional time in leadership development and training with the Board, Elders, and Deacons. Enhance the role of Deacons. We are blessed to have the depth of leadership talent that we do at Woodmont.
- 2) CHILDRENS/FAMILY MINISTRY - Maintain and build on the momentum that we currently have. Welcome new families and get them connected into the life of the church. Provide opportunities that strengthen families, marriages, and parenting skills.
- 3) CONNECTION - Continue to get new members plugged into the life of the church. Recruit small group leaders who can start additional small groups. Challenge established members to reach out and connect with newer members.
- 4) EVERY MEMBER IN MINISTRY - Work to make sure every member has a ministry or mission they are involved in and passionate about. Help our members discover their spiritual gifts so that they can use those gifts to serve others.
- 5) STEWARDSHIP - Grow Stewardship participation numbers (pledging units) and move closer to a $3 Million operating budget. We have made significant progress with this year's campaign. Cultivate a culture of generosity and sacrificial giving of time, talent, and treasure.
- 6) CAMPUS PLAN - Complete drawings of a south end addition (chapel and additional children's classrooms below), get bids, and talk to major donors. This concept came out of the visioning process a few years ago.
- 7) YOUTH MINISTRY - Successfully transition the Disciples class (5th graders) into the youth group. Get our youth more involved in worship. Build stronger connections among the youth parents.
- 8) MISSION & OUTREACH - Remain a missional church while being realistic about the number of organizations we support. Grow our mission committee. Let South Hall continue to be a hub for mission and outreach as it has been for many years.
- 9) STAFFING - Continue to keep the right people on the team and align staff with areas of strength and giftedness. Keep the staff working together to live out our mission. Support the staff and encourage them to do self-care.
- 10) THE BRIDGE - Grow the worship attendance at the Bridge to closer to 100. Raise greater awareness that we now offer contemporary worship in the morning.

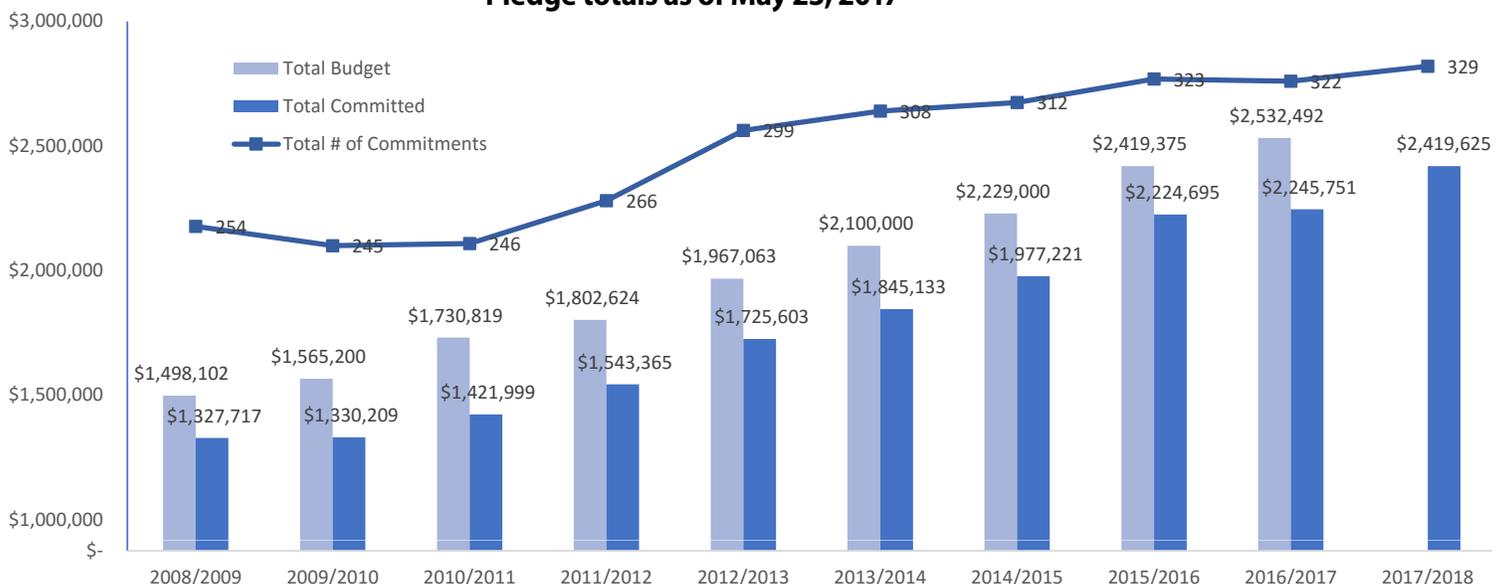

There is a lot going on at Woodmont. It's a busy place. These goals certainly do not encompass everything but they do touch on many of the areas that are very important for the life of the church. It is also important for us to be aware of our core values as a church: Welcoming, Outstanding Worship, Outreach, Different Traditions, Mission and Ministry, On the Move, Nurturing, Transforming. These values remind us of who we are as a congregation as we get ready to celebrate the church's 74th birthday in July.

Blessings,

Serve Somebody

by Thom Schuyler

Clay has been wonderfully persistent in guiding us into being a Missional congregation. This is a large and laudable goal and there are infinite layers to its implementation. As the WCC staff member with the privilege of working within our Mission and Outreach structures, I have witnessed the great strides we are making toward this vision.

In recent years my good friend, Steve LaForge, has served as Chair of our Missions Committee. Steve and his wife Deb have been tireless in their commitment to serving others and leading so many of us into service, as well. They have led by example through their efforts with Habitat For Humanity, the Morgan-Scott Project, Room In the Inn, Walk Through Bethlehem, Hope Force, International, Unbound and many other projects of which most of us are unaware. Steve has decided to step down from his role as Chair of Missions at the end of this fiscal year (June 30). I wish to express my gratitude for his focused and inspirational leadership and I urge each of you to offer Steve a big Thank You for his service when you see him at Church.

This time of transition seems a perfect moment to encourage each of you to step up and become more involved in our Mission initiatives. There are many opportunities to plug in at many levels for individuals, couples and families. And these opportunities exist throughout the year. Most of our hands-on programs are local, some regional and a handful of international projects, as well.

Please reach out to me by email (below) if you wish to join our Woodmont Missions group. We will keep you informed of the opportunities to Serve Somebody.

Blessings,

Picky Eater

by Andra Moran

When I was pregnant, I had a few prayers in regular rotation:

"Dear God, please let my baby be healthy and strong."

"God, help me to be a good mother and to raise this child well."

"God, please, please, please, please don't let me have a kid who is a picky eater."

My fervent prayer that I be spared a picky eater seems to have been answered. Now one year old, little Calla has an adventurous palate. She chows down on cabbage spring rolls from the Thai place on our block, and eats spicy curries with the grown ups. She likes sushi and tortillas and barbecue and asparagus, and like many people her age, she delights in mac and cheese.

Eating at the table with Calla is one of my great joys, even with its messiness. I love the way she relishes whatever is offered on her plate, and the curiosity with which she explores a new food.

Recently, I've been thinking about how we are at The Table with God— how sometimes, we show up to The Table as picky eaters:

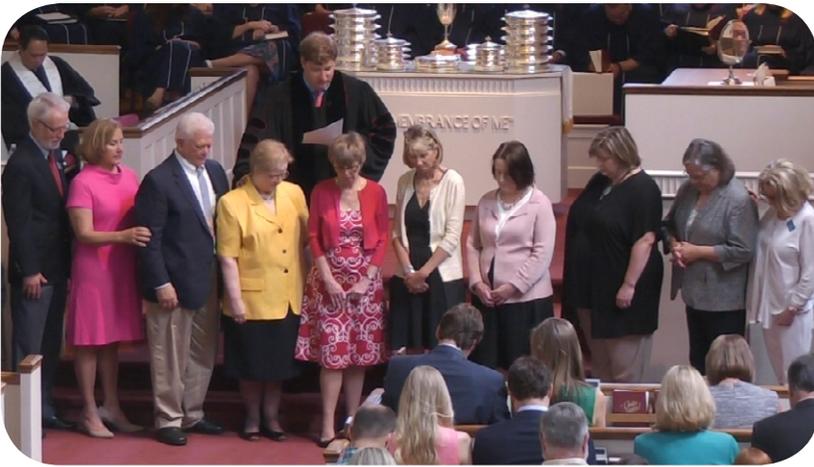

"Oh, wait, you're serving grace? I prefer absolution— it's less messy."

"About the menu at your place, forgiveness doesn't really agree with me, so I'll just get something else on my own."

"I got Your invitation to come to the meal, but I can't make it this week because I have a few things that are more important."

As I think back over my own relationship with God and the many different settings where I've had the privilege of receiving communion, it would be easy to choke on the ways that I myself have been picky at God's Table. Instead of rehashing my missteps, though, I'm headed back to church this Sunday where I can gather at the communion table with my Woodmont family, and share and sup together, partaking in God's extravagant and abundant love. Hope to see you there!

Transitions by Michael Graham

Guillaume Dufay's life (1397-1474) spanned the end of the medieval period into the renaissance. Like many artists whose lives encompass two periods (Mozart, Beethoven, Tchaikovsky, Schoenberg, Van Dyke, e.g.) his art took the best from his early experience and incorporated changes that would later become standard past his lifetime. Dufay's music contains stark medieval charm, yet mixes in the warmth of the Renaissance. Listening to his music enables one to experience the Gothic and Renaissance periods simultaneously.

All of us find ourselves in transitions- with employment, within the family, within our performing abilities and opportunities, and from one age category into the next. How we handle these transitions is important. It is good to treat these transitional times as many artists have, taking the best of the past and creating a new way for the future.

Lord, help us to experience our life transitions with grace and peace.

"In peace I will lie down and sleep, for you alone, Lord, make me dwell in safety." - Psalm 4:8

Troubling Texts: The Binding of Isaac by Alexis James Waggoner

As we dive into our second week of looking at specific troubling texts, I want to reframe our understanding of the Binding of Isaac, and offer an alternative interpretation.

What if we're making the wrong assumption about the "testing" happening in the story of the binding of Isaac (Gen 22:1-18)? Traditionally we read this story to be about God's call for Abraham to be willing to sacrifice his son. Different modes have been used to try to make sense of this: Maybe Isaac knew God would provide a different sacrifice; maybe it's a (disturbing) lesson in priorities; maybe the authors - from their position writing at a later date and knowing the outcome - created or read into this story the extent of God's involvement in order to convey themes of obedience and faithfulness to a people that was prone to wander.

But as I've struggled with this text, and come up against these interpretations I'm forced to acknowledge that they don't fully honor the story I believe the Bible to be telling: A story about a God who is creating order out of chaos, ushering divine, inclusive love into the world through a call for right treatment of creation, in order to bring about renewal and redemption in the world.

To be sure there are other stories scripture is telling — a need for obedience being one — that the Binding of Isaac text might more closely align with. But when confronted by a story that doesn't seem to pass muster when related to God's love and care for creation, I feel compelled to investigate! And this is exactly why it may be helpful to view the Binding of Isaac from a different perspective.

I agree that the traditional interpretations of this story, which hang on righteousness and obedience, need to be wrestled with as well. But what if the "testing" isn't about Abraham's willingness to sacrifice Isaac, but is about his willingness to engage with God about what Abraham knows to be right? What if Abraham's response isn't the one God is looking for? What if Abraham is taking faithfulness to an ungodly conclusion?

The heroines and heroes of the Bible are frequently tested - it's a literary tool just like the plots in our favorite epic adventure tales. And these protagonists often push back, at times leading to further revelation of God's character.

So at the very least God can definitely handle push back, and we could even make the argument that God encourages or rewards a healthy dialogue. A well-reasoned back-and-forth is exactly NOT what happens in the story of Abraham and Isaac. It's clear from different parts of the story - and absolutely expected! - that Abraham doesn't WANT to do what's been asked, but he isn't fighting back. It's not because he's afraid to fight back: he has argued with God in other instances, like when he questioned whether or not he and Sarah will have a child, or when he advocated on behalf of the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah (Gen 18:16-33).

Maybe God is expecting Abraham to continue in this vein, in which case we can only speculate about the outcome. Maybe God had another point to teach that would have been illustrated through a discussion with Abraham, maybe God was actually encouraging Abraham's love and devotion to Isaac. Of course, these are all hypotheticals gleaned from reading between the lines. What we do know is that - regardless of if there was another, more ideal way this story could have played out - in the end God praises Abraham's faithfulness.

Yes, God commends Abraham for not withholding Isaac, but could God have been surprised at Abraham's compliance? Could this have gone another - more faithful - way?

UNINVITED BIBLE CLASS STARTS JUNE 5TH

A new women's Bible study will start on June 5th that examines past and present hurts to discover how the Bible can help us handle feelings of being left out, isolated or lonely. The class will use the video, Uninvited, by Lysa TerKeurst as a springboard to discover healthier ways of looking at rejection by going to new places spiritually with the help of Jesus.

Since the class is video based: you don't have to buy the book to attend! Even if you can't make all the sessions, there still we be something for you to use in your daily life. The bible study author, TerKeurst, assures us that "Rejection never has the final say! Rejection may be a delay or a distraction or even devastation for a season but it's never a final destination. You are destined for a love that can never be diminished, tarnished, shaken or taken. With Jesus you are forever safe, forever accepted, forever held, completely loved and always invited in."

Classes will be held in the Boardroom at 6:45 p.m. on the following Wednesdays: June 7, June 21, June 28, July 5, and July 12 with a concluding social event later in July. (These Wed. evening dates coincide with the summer Gospel dinners.)

Call Lisa Rollins with any questions and y'all are invited to attend the classes beginning on Wed. June 7th at 6:45 p.m. in the Boardroom.
