

Do you love the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)?

Read Presbyterians Today's blog—One Church, Many Voices

We are storytellers. We are everyday Presbyterians who want to talk honestly about the future of the church. We are part of a creative team commissioned by Presbyterians Today to ask questions about who's getting a platform to speak and who's not. And this is our canvas.

Our blog is a holy place for reflection—a safe place to talk and grow as disciples of Christ. Here you'll find writing, art, videos, and podcasts. Some of it will be bilingual. Some will be collaborative projects, bringing together artist and wordsmith. All of it will push the boundaries of what passes for conversation in the church and will, we hope, inspire us to dream bigger when it comes to the gospel. Our opinions are ours alone, and our thoughts may sometimes be messy. They may make you feel uncomfortable. They are not meant to be the last word. They are an invitation—a love letter to the church we love.

We invite you to read our blog and see for yourself.

Visit the blog