

Curriculum and Instruction is excited to announce that the application is live for the Social Studies Fellows for 2018-2019.

The Social Studies Fellows are a prestigious group of exemplar teachers who are responsible for presenting quality professional development at District Learning Days and Social Studies Collaboratives, vetting curriculum and resources as a focus group for content expertise, piloting inquiry-based learning modules, and other exciting professional opportunities.

Fellows also receive specially targeted professional development opportunities with noted national experts and other opportunities for growth such as book studies.

Fellows have an opportunity to earn up to $1500 per semester by completing up to 66 billable hours of work outside of school hours.

Please consider applying to be part of this elite team.

As part of the application process, be prepared to submit the following documents:

- Resume
- Copy of your most recent TEM scores from TNCompass
- A lesson plan with student work samples or a video of the sample lesson

Applications will close May 1st at noon central time. The application can be found here.
