SEEKING THE RIGHT BLEND

A new computer-driven concept in learning gets a workout in Morristown. By Tammy La Gorce

IN MID-JUNE, just before school let out for the summer, Erica Hartman and Mackey Pendergrast slipped into the back of Lei Han Hong's second- and third-grade class at Normandy Park Elementary School in Morristown, doing their best to be invisible.

Hartman, the supervisor of technology integration in the Morris School District, and Pendergrast, the district superintendent, watched appreciatively as a group of students sitting in a circle around Hong used pencil and paper to demonstrate, with varying degrees of success, the break-apart strategy for solving multiplication problems.
