

Parent to Parent New York Inc.

Changing the Way We Understand and Respond to Social and Emotional Challenges

Join us to learn more about the latest research, effective alternatives to traditional behavioral interventions and practical solutions to problems at home, in school and the community.

Objectives:

- Understanding the neurological and cognitive underpinnings. Why do these individuals struggle to relate and learn?
- Adjusting the way we teach and parent. How are current practices and beliefs keeping us from effectively improving outcomes?
- Improving outcomes for individuals with social and behavioral disorders. What are the specific practices, strategies and accommodations that lead to improvements?
- Fostering cooperative relationships within families, between student and teacher, and among school personnel and parents. How can mutual respect and understanding improve conditions?

Please Join us for a free full day seminar with Lorraine Millan, MA. Lorraine is a Behavior Specialist and a special needs mom herself. She is a direct service provider and a consultant, who has been servicing families and individuals living with social and behavioral challenges for over 25 years.

When: Saturday, March 4th , 2016 from 10am. to 4pm.

Place: Institute of Basic Research located at 1050 Forest Hill Road, SINY

To register: please call 718-494-4872 or email siptp@aol.com

Families must RSVP prior to Monday, February 27th

Lunch will be served.