The education we provide lasts for generations.

K-12 Adult Education educates parents, and research clearly shows that educated parents raise better-educated children who are more likely to succeed in life — and less likely to end up in poverty or prison.

But as demand for Adult Education grows, funding isn’t keeping pace, forcing deep cuts in student services for those we serve — immigrants, people in poverty, the homeless and inmates reintegrating into society.

Adult education is a gift for generations. Celebrate it. Don’t shortchange it.
