PALS

Presented in Partnership with Emergency Medicine Learning and Resource Center

The official "no stress" program developed by the American Heart Association and The American Academy of Pediatrics, our PALS Program is designed to emphasize early recognition and management of potentially life threatening situations in the pediatric patient rather than merely "running code". Through the use of stress free case based scenarios and interactive skills stations, participants will receive instruction in the recognition and management of respiratory failure and shock, basic life support and airway management, rhythm disturbances, vascular access, trauma, and managing cardiopulmonary arrest in the infant and child. Seven contact hours will be awarded per day.
