

Tribal Youth Health Policy Fellowship

Roles & Responsibilities

While a large part of being a National Indian Health Board Tribal Youth Health Policy Fellow (TYHPF) is bringing your own ideas and thoughts, there are several responsibilities that all fellows will have. Know that this description is subject to change. The NIHB staff will track and communicate the progress of each TYHPF member. Before applying, carefully consider the commitment that you will make to Native youth in your region --and make sure that it is a realistic expectation for you at this time.

The TYHPF will be comprised of interested, active and influential Native youth from each of 12 regions of Indian Country who are willing to utilize their expertise, knowledge, energy and influence to impact the programs and policies of the National Indian Health Board.

TYHPF members are:

- To advocate for and serve as a liaison for Native youth.
- To provide feedback to the National Indian Health Board from Tribal communities within their region.
- To provide advice on relevant and timely health priorities facing Native youth.
- To have strong interest in furthering Indian health program and policy priorities at Tribal, regional, and national levels and increasing awareness among their peers.

TYHPF members will:

- Attend all meetings of the TYHPF. This is including the Native Youth Health Summit in the summer of 2018 and quarterly phone calls.
- Promote Indian health resources, news, programs and events in your region to other Native youth and Tribal leaders. This will require networking and creative communication with the other TYHPF representatives and NIHB staff.
- Write 'blog' articles for NIHB website, social media outlets, and newsletters. As an expert student involved in activities, you should share your insight, ideas, and thoughts on current Indian health topics.
- As the second cohort of Policy Fellows, there will be a unique opportunity to update and develop the TYHPF's agenda, bylaws, and other founding documents.
- TYHPF members will be representatives of their own Tribes, their region, and, ultimately, the National Indian Health Board. Therefore, TYHPF members will be expected to be in good standing with their academic institution or place of employment.

If you have any questions or challenges meeting any of the requirements listed, please contact the National Indian Health Board at firstkids1st@nihb.org or (202) 507-4070.
