

Lorie White

Senior Vice President of Human Resources

Lorie is a strategic Human Resources executive with a passion for maximizing the effectiveness, value and potential of an organization's "human capital". A respected leader with demonstrated ability to gain commitment for strategic initiatives and align individual, team, business unit and company goals/objectives to drive performance, Lorie is a practical and resourceful team player who excels at bringing people with diverse perspectives and experiences together to identify win-win solutions and optimize results.

Lorie's career includes numerous strategic and often entrepreneurial accomplishments, including the design and implementation of new services and programs, facilitating the development of new teams and alliances and leading culture integration processes during business mergers/acquisitions, and participating as a senior leader in the creation and early-stage development of a technology services company. Before becoming Senior Vice President of Human Resources for Enterprise Bank & Trust in February 2014, Lorie held a number of senior-level HR positions in various healthcare organizations, including Corizon Health, WellPoint/Anthem, and BJC Health Care. As an adjunct professor in the MBA program at The John E. Simon School of Business at Maryville University, Lorie also taught courses in Organizational Behavior & Development and Business Ethics for several years. In 2017, the National Association of Professional Women (NAPW) recognized Lorie's successful career by inducting her into its VIP Women of the Year Circle.

Lorie has a Master's Degree in Education from Washington University, and has earned certifications in Change Management, Myers Briggs Type Inventory, Culture Shaping, and other areas of organizational leadership and development. An avid reader, Lorie also loves mountains, animals and music, but most of all she loves her family (especially her three year old granddaughter!)
