Nauset Disposal Announces New Community Outreach Program

Orleans, MA – On August 10, Kara Boulé of Nauset Disposal presented a recycling program to preschool aged classes at The Children's Workshop in South Dennis to help educate the children on recycling. The group played sorting games, talked about the importance of reusing or recycling materials and read a book titled "Don't Throw That Away", written by Laura Bergen.

A company dedicated to the local community, this type of project aligns well with Nauset Disposal's community outreach program. This past spring, Nauset Disposal employees voted on four key areas to concentrate the company's community investment efforts in 2017; the outcome was a focus on Children's Services, the Environment, Veteran's Services and Basic Needs. Nauset Disposal has pledged to support programming, non-profits and events that support these causes through community projects, volunteerism and charitable giving.

Kara Boulé, Marketing & Community Investment Manager at Nauset Disposal, says of the new community outreach program, "Healthy communities depend on involvement of residents, organizations and local businesses for continued success. Nauset Disposal supports many causes in our region, and we are looking forward to focusing more on the areas where our employees want to make a difference. Ensuring our employees feel engaged and like they have a say in where our community outreach is focused plays an important role in Nauset Disposal's commitment to future growth and expansion. I think it also shows that this company, as well as its employees, has a sincere dedication to the Cape Cod community."
