Webinar 2: Change in Condition, Sepsis

Wednesday, November 29, 2017 • 10–11 a.m. PT (1–2 p.m. ET)

OVERVIEW

Recognize the early signs and symptoms of sepsis infection, identification, and control.

Take this opportunity to learn from our presenter's extensive experience and expertise that can instantly be applied to help provide better care to older adults residing in post-acute settings.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

This webinar will provide demonstrations and coaching. Participants will:

- Examine the use of forms—Change in Condition and Situation Background Assessment Recommendation (SBAR)—that will increase caregiver confidence when assessing older adults in post-acute settings.
- Identify processes to recognize symptoms of sepsis for older adults in post-acute settings.

PRESENTER

Christine Aceves, MSN, RN, CNL, CEN, manages the Sepsis Program at Stanford Health Care in Palo Alto, California. She has over 30 years of nursing experience as a clinician, manager, educator, and innovator. Ms. Aceves embraces the philosophy that well-informed, well-educated, and engaged front-line staff members drive quality patient outcomes. She is committed to delivering effective, continuous process improvement strategies across complex clinical microsystems by using adult learning principles and theory of change.

Promoting staff engagement at every step along the change process informs her approachable demeanor and success. Before turning her attention to sepsis prevention and program development, Ms. Aceves worked for many years as an emergency department nurse, where she sharpened her skills as a consummate patient advocate.
