

Education Day 2018

Please join us for a 60 minute Department Rounds presentation followed by a 2 hour skill-building workshop featuring:

Dr. David Taylor

Succeeding with Residency Education in the World of CBME – Skeptics ~~Welcome~~ Needed

Wednesday, November 21st, 2018

9:00 AM – 10:00 AM

Lower Auditorium,
West 5th Campus

David Taylor is a General Internist in the Department of Medicine at Queen's University in Canada. He has served in various education roles at Queen's, and is currently the core residency Program Director. He obtained his Master's in Health Professions Education at the University of Illinois, Chicago, focusing his work on Competency-Based Medical Education (CBME). He participated in the team developing the Entrustable Professional Activities for undergraduate medical education in Canada, and has helped lead the Internal Medicine Specialty Committee at the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada in developing the EPAs for Internal Medicine residency training. Most recently, he has been kept busy rolling out CBME at Queen's University.

Register
Now!

A limited registration
skill-building workshop will follow the presentation from

10:15 AM – 12:15 PM

(lunch to follow from 12:15PM-1:00PM)

This workshop will introduce participants to the mindset and assessment skills necessary for supervising residents within a model of competency based education, and will be of particular importance to department members involved in medical education.

Contact Lesley Wellington at wellinl@mcmaster.ca to register.

The presentation and workshop are both Royal College accredited small group events.