Families and Forgiveness: Therapy, Healing and the Ethics of Reconciliation
Keynote Presenter: Dr. Terry Hargrave

Description:
Forgiveness is about many things, but at the core, forgiveness is about recovering from violation and trauma in a way that does not harm the victim or victimizer. Using the Restoration Model of therapy, participants will understand how love and trustworthiness form essential frameworks in the human psyche associated with identity and safety. When love and trustworthiness are violated, pain and coping results which tends to turn the victimized into potential victimizer.

The Restoration Model outlines four pathways or stations to forgiveness: Insight Understanding, Giving the Opportunity for Compensation, and Overt Forgiveness. Through each station, ethical considerations for the individual, family and other relationships will be discussed and examined.

Richly illustrated through case examples, experiential activities and group discussion, this workshop promises to move therapists to a new understanding of helping those who have been hurt by relationships.
